

Cease and Desist Letter

Date: [Insert Date]

To: Dan Counsell
Realmac Software

Re: Defamatory and Misleading Statements about Stacks 6

Dear Mr. Counsell,

This letter serves as formal notice that your recent statements on the Discourse-hosted Realmac Software forum, along with content generated by the "ElementsBot" under your direction, contain false, misleading, and defamatory claims about the Stacks 6 product and its developer.

These public comments — which assert that Stacks is a "dead-end," that development is "sporadic" or non-existent, and that the product is maintained by a developer who has "moved on" — are factually incorrect and appear to damage the reputation and economic interests of a competing product.

Stacks 6 is actively developed and maintained, with regular public beta releases (including Beta 43 issued this week). The repeated mischaracterization of the product's status and ecosystem on a public forum, amplified through AI-generated responses under your control, constitutes:

- Defamation and trade libel
- Misleading commercial statements
- Unfair competition practices under applicable business and consumer protection laws

It is worth noting that both UK and US laws provide strong protection against false and misleading statements that cause reputational or economic harm. Under the UK Defamation Act 2013, a statement may be defamatory if it has caused or is likely to cause serious harm. Similarly, in the US, such statements can be actionable as commercial disparagement or unfair competition.

Immediate Demands We hereby demand that you: 1. Cease and desist from publishing or authorizing any further false or disparaging statements about Stacks 6, its development status, or its team. 2. Remove or retract the aforementioned defamatory comments and any similarly misleading content currently visible on the Realmac forum or other platforms under your control, including posts made by the "ElementsBot." 3. Refrain from using AI tools to disseminate misleading commentary about Stacks or its ecosystem going forward.

We trust this matter can be resolved quickly and professionally. Please confirm in writing by Friday, June 27, 2025, that you will comply with the above demands.

If you have questions or wish to discuss a resolution, you may contact me directly.

Sincerely,
Joe Workman

Founder, Weaver's Space
joe@weavers.space
<https://www.weavers.space/>